

HANNAH HOUSE

A historic mansion nestled in Indianapolis, Indiana, stands as a testament to the courage and resilience of those who fought against the injustices of slavery. Built in 1858 by Alexander Hannah, a fervent abolitionist, this stately residence served as a beacon of hope for countless souls seeking refuge and freedom along the Underground Railroad. Its walls echo with the whispers of the past, bearing witness to the harrowing journeys of escaped slaves and the unwavering determination of those who sheltered them. Today, the Hannah House stands as a living monument to the abolitionist movement, offering guided tours and educational programs to honor its rich history and inspire future generations.
